Do you see two denim outfits here?
Well, you're wrong.

We feel like fooling around today (isn't that what Saturday is for?)
so you're going to have to read this whole ad before we tell you why you're wrong.
Unless you can guess.

We don't care if you've got closets full of denims. You don't have a denim like this denim outfit.
And neither does anybody else you know.
These are totally new,
entirely different.

They're made of 100%,
right-as-rain cotton.
But that's not different.
They're pre-washed to go on soft.
The fading's already been done for you. And there's nothing different about that, either.

The manufacturer is a good ol' company called Lee™.
But you probably already own jeans with a Lee label.

Now the styling's nice and new. It's quite possible you haven't got a jacket that's hip-length, with snaps instead of buttons.
And two zip pockets.
But neither is that the answer we're after.

So it's not the fabric, not the label, not even the tailoring that makes these denims so dramatically different. There's your process of elimination for you. Down the drain.

Give up?
Say "Uncle Altman's"
and we'll tell you.
These new Lee denims are completely reversible! Ha!

You can wear them inside out and outside in. Yes, the jacket and the pants, both. And that's the reason, we sketched one denim outfit twice:
so you can see that the lighter and the darker blues show up differently depending on which side is showing outside.

Now check out these prices.
The jacket, in s.m.l.xl., is just 27.50.
And the coordinating panel jeans (with two zip pockets, back yoke and belt loops) are a mere 22.50 in 28 to 36.

Don't be mad at us for kidding you.
Be glad we found you some more new ideas for Saturdays.
Smile when you come up to Spare Parts on our sixth floor.

P.S. If you guessed, please feel free to tell six people that you're smarter than Altman's.

Jewish Defense League to Step Up Protests at Soviet U.N. Mission

By DAVID BIRD
 Jewish Defense League members are expected to picket the Soviet mission to the United Nations in front of the building at 136 East 67th Street on Thursday night. The group, which has 15,000 dues-paying members, said it would picket the mission to protest the arrest of a Jewish American, Robert B. Rosenstock, by Soviet agents in New York City last week. The group also said it would picket the mission to protest the arrest of a Jewish American, Robert B. Rosenstock, by Soviet agents in New York City last week.

because both countries have decided to ignore the Soviet Jew issue. We are going to provoke an international crisis." Last Tuesday William W. Scranton, the chief United States delegate to the United Nations, said that he was concerned about the harassment of Soviet diplomat and said an inquiry was underway to determine whether such actions were violating Federal laws. Yesterday Robert B. Rosenstock, the legal officer of the United States Mission to the United Nations, praised the police department's handling of the Thursday demonstration. "We had superb police work there and it worked very well," Mr. Rosenstock said, referring to the events of Thursday night. He added that officials were "continuing to explore other avenues of dealing with the harassment but he did not mention any further specific measures." Police Capt. Benjamin McRann, who commands the 19th Precinct that includes the Soviet Mission, said his men would continue to limit the demonstrations in line with a court order issued in 1971 when the league demonstrators stepped up their actions. Placards to Be Allowed Captain McRann said the demonstrators would be confined behind barricades across the street from the mission and that they would be allowed to carry placards "but without sticks, because they could be used as weapons." Mr. Fisch said that "at every demonstration we will carry the most outrageously provocative signs we have ever carried." The signs, he said, will be like those carried Thursday night, which said: "Death to Russian Children" and "Kidnap Russian Diplomats." Besides the demonstrations, Mr. Fisch said, other actions will be taken, including sending individual league members "to engage in dialogues with Soviet diplomats as they emerge from the mission. We used to call it harassing, but harassing is illegal." The league was hampered yesterday in one of its planned attempts to protest Soviet activities. Mr. Fisch said that members of his organization went to Carnegie Hall to buy 15 tickets to the Don Cossacks of Rostov, a song and dance ensemble scheduled to open there. The league has disrupted at least three performances of Soviet artists in Carnegie Hall this year. "But when we went to buy the tickets," Mr. Fisch said, "we were told the performance was canceled due to technical difficulties." The league then claimed a victory in that it had provoked the cancellation, but unofficially it was understood that tickets were just not selling well enough to justify the performance.

Hungarians Assail Kissinger for View On Eastern Europe

VIENNA, April 9 (Reuters)—Hungary, in an unusually sharp press attack on Henry A. Kissinger, today accused the Secretary of State of breach of faith in recent statements of American policy toward Eastern Europe. A commentary in the semi-official daily Magyar Hirlap, quoted by the Hungarian press agency, said Mr. Kissinger had discredited the word of the United States. Mr. Kissinger is rarely attacked with such directness by newspapers within the Soviet bloc, where he is credited as the main figure behind policies of détente.

Magyar Hirlap said Mr. Kissinger had made the extreme right wing rejoice by declaring that the United States opposed Soviet rule over Eastern Europe and should aim in the long run to influence events in the area. "This can only be seen as indicating that United States ruling circles have still not given up the idea of forcibly changing the social order of the Socialist countries," it said. Referring to last year's 35-nation conference in Helsinki on European security, the newspaper said: "Nearly nine months after the Helsinki summit, Kissinger has discredited the trustworthiness of the United States because from his statement one could conclude that one cannot believe in the obligations United States leaders have assumed."

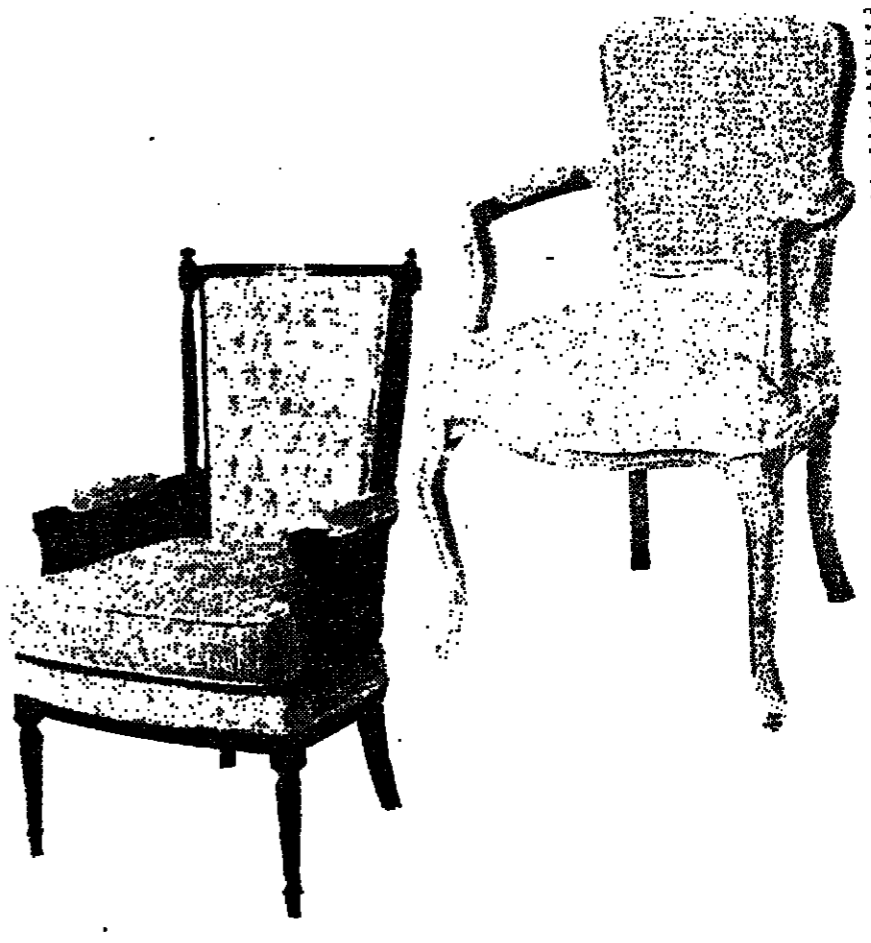

Magyar Hirlap said the pressures of a United States election year were no excuse. The commentary, reflecting growing Soviet bloc irritation over what is perceived as a swing to the right in United States policy since President Ford stopped using the word "détente," said East-West cooperation was too serious a matter to permit "concessions to irresponsible braggarts of the extreme right-wing camp just for the sake of election tactics." Bombs Kill 2 in Ulster BELFAST, Northern Ireland, April 9 (Reuters)—Two men were killed and 19 persons were injured tonight in two separate bomb attacks on Roman Catholic-owned taverns in Northern Ireland, police officials here said.

league is charging that migration of Jews from Soviet Union has slowed from a rate of about 13,000 this year to about 10,000. The United States Mission to the United Nations has the pressure on Moscow to more Jews to leave the country. Mr. Fisch said the demonstrators would picket the mission at a rate of at least one per week with the next one on Sunday or Monday. Fisch said his organization had 15,000 dues-paying members, of whom at least 100 were prepared to go to jail for their beliefs. Mr. Fisch and others arrested Thursday released later for hearing misdemeanor charges on Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, according to the report, is prepared to send a finding team to the Portuguese colony to assess its economic and other conditions. The Soviet-backed Government in Luanda, reported to have control of virtually the territory of the former colony, has delayed a scheduled application for membership in the world organization. The Luanda Government has applied only to become a member of the World Health Organization, a Geneva-based, specialized agency of the United Nations, but reportedly is still waiting whether it should send its bid for recognition to the world body itself until this year.

the year seems to be fear of either the United States or China, or both, will veto application for admission. The matter is considered in the Security Council. China did not participate in the vote, and the United States together with Britain, France, and Japan — abstained in voting when the Security Council adopted the Resolution March 31 condemning what it termed South Africa's aggression against Angola, and calling on the South African Government to compensate the former Portuguese territory for damages.

At the same time, reports reaching here through various channels that the Luanda Government has established formal contacts with South Africa. The immediate motivation in such exchanges said to be Luanda's concern to keep construction work on Cuneene River hydroelectric project going.

PARIS, April 9 (UPI)—André Giscard d'Estaing resigned today as secretary general of the Gaullist party to make way for the growing number of the left-wing parties. The Gaullist Union of Democrats for the Republic decided to elect a new party leader April 24. Mr. Bord, Minister of Veterans' Affairs, is considered an able administrator but has little popular appeal. His resignation was part of jockeying that has begun between President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing's coalition party and their adversaries, the Socialists and Communists, in preparation for coming elections that will decide two years from now whether France will have Communists in government for the first time since 1957. The Socialist-Communist coalition swept to victory in local elections last month. The stakes get bigger with municipal elections next year and even bigger with the decisive ballot for Parliament in 1978.

cuador Earthquakes Kill 7 and Injure 50

QUITO, Ecuador, April 9 (AP)—Two strong earthquakes a mile apart shook the north coast and mountains of Ecuador during the night. Authorities said that at least seven persons were killed and 50 injured and more victims were buried in the rubble.

All the casualties were reported in the port city of Esmeraldas. A radio station there al high-rise buildings. The radio station quoted civil defense officials as having said that troops rushed to a small, three-story hotel that collapsed and dug out the bodies of two dead. More victims were feared buried under the fallen hotel, it said.

The quake also shook Quito, about 110 miles southwest of Esmeraldas, but there were no reports of deaths or injuries in the capital.

The national observatory in Quito said the first shock occurred at 2:09 A.M. Eastern standard time and was followed by another a minute later. The two tremors lasted a total of 12 seconds and were centered off the coast in the Esmeraldas area, it said.

Esmeraldas, a city of 60,000, is the major city on Ecuador's lightly populated northwestern coast, a tropical forest area below a high, arid plain that rises to the Andes. The Pacific port city is about 70 miles south of the Colombian border at the mouth of the Esmeraldas River. It is a major fishing port, a terminus of Ecuador's trans-Andean oil pipeline and a trading

Panama's Leader Calls for New Pact On Canal by 1977

PANAMA, April 9 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, Panama's chief executive, says serious trouble could erupt in the United States-owned Panama Canal Zone if a new treaty is not reached by 1977 to turn the zone over to Panamanians.

He said in a recent interview that he had an unwritten pact with Panamanian students and workers for prudence until the completion of the negotiations were finished or, if necessary, to break down.

"We are prepared for whatever solution," General Torrijos said. "We have set 1977 as the goal. Patience has its limits."

He added that the current negotiations, which began in 1973, "have made substantial progress," but that the United States Presidential campaign had slowed them down.

The chief American negotiator, Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, was quoted by the United States House of Representatives Committee in Washington yesterday as having said that there was no immediate prospect for a new treaty until the negotiations were finished or, if necessary, to break down.

His testimony was given in a closed session, but Representative

Art: Chinese Landscape Paintings at the Met

Met Is Marking Acquisition of a Sung Scroll

By JOHN RUSSELL... one of the most disquieting experiences that one can have in a great museum is to stumble upon a Chinese landscape painting that is all of several centuries old.

"Summer Mountains," an 11th-century hand-scroll by Chu Ting, is at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. It is done on silk, in ink and light color.

is brought home to us by a small exhibition of these landscape paintings... the Met is proud enough of its acquisition of this scroll painting.

in an age when exhibitions get bigger and bigger, there is much to be said for one that says what it has to say in one small room and in a hooded light.

Other exhibitions include: Bruce Marden (Sperone Westwater Fischer Gallery, 142 Greene Street); Brice Marden's is a consolidatory art; in his new show he takes certain triumphs of the last 20 years—the paintings of Newman and Kelly, especially—and sees what kind of an echo they set up in his own unmistakable low-key sensibility.

one end to the other in terms of painting and drawing; there is enough material in that book for a dozen exhibitions. Art is in all this the pacific element, but it is an element that is continually being intruded upon.

he paintings in question pose upon us a change of pace. It is pointless to them for the quick succulent rewards we get from a landscape by Matisse or Pissarro, let alone Derain or Vlaminck. Most of the time we actually move from our way among the step by step, unhurried. Sometimes we have to back, since the West-eye finds it difficult to adjust to the lateral movement of Chinese landscape painting; sometimes we need to plunge into the undergrowth. Either way, we have to come to terms with a landscape art that has come to its own.

In paintings like "To Corfu" and "Le Mien," the interaction of color and shape, scale and proportion, is keyed to deep feeling of a more personal sort. Mr. Marden knows what Gauguin knew, that "a kilo of green is more green than an ounce of green," and he also knows what Matisse knew, that it is only when a color is put next to another color that it begins to fulfill its expressive power.

What he seems to be saying is that there are archetypal human situations that just don't fit into a world dominated by hardware, and by the manuals of "instruction" which come with hardware. (Don't miss, in this context, the instruction book for imported German cars that Mr. Cohen Gan has revised from

House Approves $2 Billion Rise in Military Authorization Bill

Continued From Page 1, Col. 4... The House today approved a $2-billion increase in military authorization for the next 30 years.

The Defense Department, however, is being pressed by the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Senator John C. Stennis, Democrat of Mississippi, to take a position before the committee starts considering the House-passed bill in the next few weeks.

Amendments Rejected... By overwhelming margins, the House rejected today amendments by Representative Thomas J. Downey, Democrat of Suffolk County, that would have banned the flight-testing of maneuverable missile warheads.

With the obvious shift in the House's attitude on defense spending, the Pentagon's critics finally gave up offering amendments rather than go down to repeated defeats.

Representative Robert N. Giaimo, Democrat of Connecticut, is considering offering an amendment that would provide a $3.3 billion reduction in the Administration's defense budget.

Floyd Raises Lead to 5 on 66 for 131

is a fast player, and when he is going well, he is eager to shoot and move on. But the pace of play was slow today. Floyd and his playing partner, Ziegler, had to wait five, six and seven minutes for every shot. He found that wearing, but he didn't fret.

"It's hard for me to wait around that long," Floyd said. "Lots of bad thoughts of what could happen come into your mind, but I couldn't let it bother me. I've handled it so good."

Floyd's round was fashioned out of five birdies, the eagle and one bogey. On the par-5 second hole his second shot caught a greenside bunker, but he blasted out to six feet and made the putt for a birdie. He birdied the sixth, a par-3 of 190 yards, by hitting a 5-iron to 12 feet and making the putt. On the 330-yard eighth he hit a sand wedge to six feet and rolled in that putt for a birdie.

The hot streak got hotter on the back nine. After birdies on the 13th and 14th, he reached the green of the 520-yard 15th in 2. It was more than reaching, really—he hit a No. 3 wood over the pond onto the hard green, and it stopped just three feet from the hole.

His only bogey came on the 17th, where he hit a fat No. 8 iron. "The first shot I didn't hit good. That left him on the front fringe, 80 feet from the hole, and his chip was 10 feet short. He missed the putt."

In two days this is how Floyd has scored: 13 birdies, one eagle, two bogeys and 20 pars. On the four par-5 holes he has carded seven birdies and an eagle.

This five-shot lead recalls a runaway victory in 1969. "But that was in the American Golf Classic," Floyd said, "not in the Masters."

In that same year Floyd won his only major tournament, the Professional Golfers' Association championship.

As for Nicklaus's appraisal of his hot streak, Floyd agreed—that he could maintain it.

"I've proved it in the past," Floyd said. "My game is very sound, and there's no reason I shouldn't go on playing this way."

Nicklaus shot his 69 under what he called "reasonably difficult" playing conditions—the wind often changed direction, it died and it rose.

"When we started today," Nicklaus said of his round with Crenshaw, "Ben was three shots behind me. When we got to the fourth tee, we were even at six under. I felt like a backer."

Not really. There were the two eagles on the front nine. The first one came on the second hole, where he hit a No. 3 iron to 10 feet. On the 365-yard seventh he had a shot of 95 yards to the green, and he used a sand wedge.

The ball took two hops, one in front of the hole and one behind. Then the backspin took effect, and the ball "sucked back" into the hole.

Nicklaus is 36 years old and Crenshaw is 24 and obviously doesn't have Jack's astute judgment. On the par-5 hole Crenshaw's drive was 20 yards behind Nicklaus's.

"When I saw him whip out the 3-wood to go for the green," Nicklaus recalled, "I said, 'Oh, to be 24 again! I wouldn't have thought of going for it from where he was, either today or when I was 24.'"

But Crenshaw did, and he carried the pond to the right edge, about 70 feet from the hole. From there he rolled a putt that stopped less than a foot short. Birdie.

Crenshaw called his round a "sloppy up-and-down" one, an eagle, four birdies and four bogeys for 70. The eagle he shot on No. 2 was implausible, Crenshaw got off a poor drive, so short it didn't even catch the fairway bunker. From that position he didn't have any yardage measured. But he hit "an extra solid" 3-wood, "one of the best" which he estimated went 270 yards. It landed six feet from the cup.

He contrasted his own "sloppy" play with Nicklaus's smooth round.

"Gosh, no matter how much you try," said Crenshaw, "you can't keep from watching him."

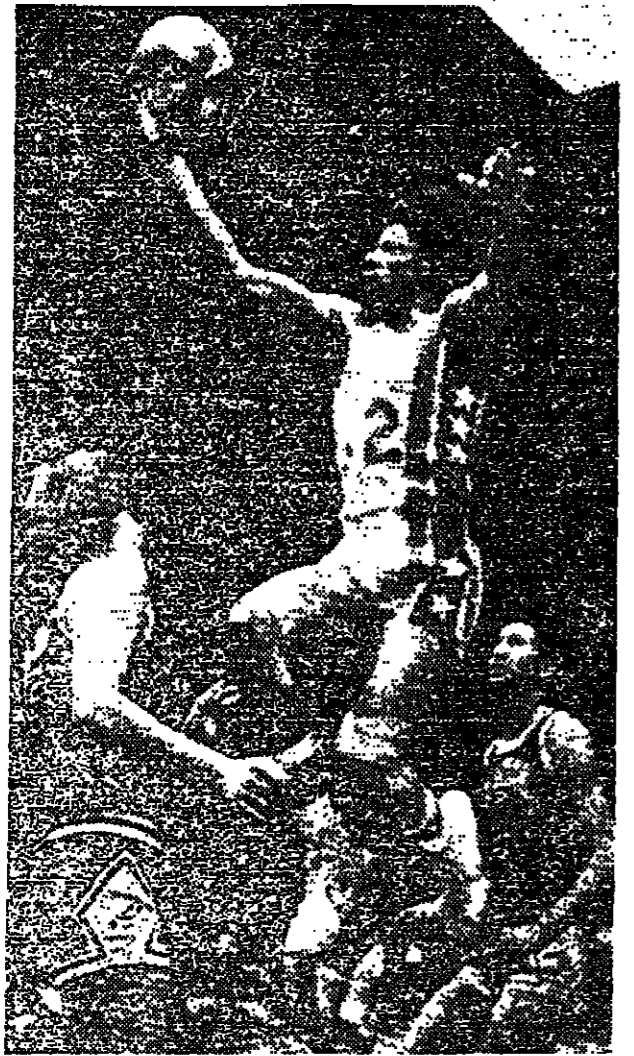

Hubert Green, the "skinny kid from Alabama," carded one eagle and four birdies for his 66, and he saved at least four pars with some deft scrambling. "I'm a good chipper," he said in the understatement of the day.

Green acknowledged it was frustrating to shoot a 66 and still stand six shots behind Floyd.

"But I've got Raymond's autograph," he said. "What can you do? I can't stop Raymond. If he wins, I'll congratulate him."

Tom Weiskopf, who tied with Johnny Miller for second place in 1975, one stroke behind Nicklaus, shot 71—144. Miller shot 73, also for 144. Miller as he often does, complained about "Sunday" placements on the first day of a tournament.

"They're the toughest I've ever seen," he said. "At 15 the hole is sitting on top of what looks like a ski mogul. I'd have had a good time watching them at 18—if I was a sadist."

the score Erving 7, San Antonio 2.

Gervin, who finished the first half leading the Spurs with 10 points, was obviously not hampered in his shooting by the injury.

At Skinner got four early baskets by taking his man, James Silas, inside and using his height advantage. At the other end, Skinner frequently sloughed off his defensive assignment, Mike Gale, to help out on Paultz.

Erving Keeps Scoring
The Nets expended their 33-18 first-quarter advantage in the second quarter with further help from the Doctor.

Antonio tried Coby Dietrich and then Mark Oberlander to little effect. Erving had 21 points for the half and the Nets led, 70-30.

Ted McClain, the Nets' third guard, made a surprise appearance in the second quarter in relief of Brian Taylor and stayed on for 10 minutes. McClain had jammed his left wrist in the Nets' last regular-season game on Wednesday and was considered a doubtful participant until game time.

Palmer Cut, Won't Quit

Special to The New York Times

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 9—With an 81 in the second round, Arnold Palmer missed the cut today for the final 36 holes of the Masters tournament. It was only the second time in 22 Masters that the 46-year-old four-time winner has failed to qualify for the final two rounds. He also missed the cut in 1968.

"But I'm not going to retire," Palmer said, "and you can print that in black type." Palmer also missed the cut in his two previous tournaments at Orlando and Jacksonville.

"My next tournament might be at Houston," Palmer said. "I have to go home and have a long debate with myself. I'm going to play the United States Open and I'll keep playing this year. I love golf more now than I ever did when I'm playing well."

Asked what level of play was acceptable to him at his age, Palmer replied: "If my level of play is something less than winning, then I won't play. I have no interest in playing mediocre golf. If I can't play a little bit better than I'm playing now, I'll give it up."

Assembly in Connecticut Approves an Austerer Budget

By LAWRENCE FELLOWS
Special to The New York Times
HARTFORD, April 9—The Connecticut General Assembly today approved a $1.3 billion budget only slightly altered and fully as austere as that proposed to the legislators in February by Gov. Ella Grasso.
In the House of Representatives which approved the appropriations package after a seven-hour debate yesterday by 110 votes to 35, the badly outnumbered Republicans tried vainly to trim $164 million from the tax package, but the measure was passed 68 to 37. The Senate cleared both packages yesterday, the revenues by 22 to 14 and the appropriations by 27 to 8.

and 25-cent tolls, instead of 15 or 20 cents on the Merritt Road and Wilbur Cross Parkways.
The Governor had wanted to save the budgetary devices for next year, to avoid the prospect of new taxes then. But this is an election year for the General Assembly, not next year, and the Assembly decided to adopt some of the devices now.
It also decided against absorbing the $30 million Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Fund into the general fund, and against stretching the state employees' work week from 35 hours to 40 and giving the employees a $300 across-the-board raise.
Representative Gerald Stevens, Republican of Milford and the minority leader in the House, was not impressed with the result.
"These are one-shot shenanigans," he said. "I pray it pays off for the state."
Although there was some tax relief for business—cutting accelerated tax collections and other budgetary devices. There were no substantial new taxes, except for another penny on the 10-cent state gasoline tax;

Egypt's Police Uncover Treasure of Antiquities

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, April 9 (Reuters)—The Egyptian police have discovered a priceless hoard of relics from the Greek and Roman eras in the cellar of a villa owned by a Greek cotton merchant, Youssef Hanna, director of the Greek-Roman museum here, said the police had found the antiquities, packed as if ready to be sent abroad. Egypt forbids the export of such treasures.
Mr. Hanna said the hoard of some 300,000 items, included Greek vases, utensils, granite and marble statues, urns and oil lamps.
He said the villa's owner, Lucas Panakis, left Egypt in the 1960's and put the treasures in the care of a Greek friend.

New Offer Is Made for the Commodore

By CARTER B. HORSLEY
The Carter chain has offered to buy the Commodore Hotel if the city can obtain title to it.
The hotel is owned by the bankrupt Penn Central Railroad, which has not paid real estate taxes on the property since 1970 and has indicated it does not expect to keep the hotel open much longer.
The offer to purchase the Commodore was the second received by the city. Donald Trump, a private developer, had offered to reconstruct it under a 50-year tax abatement plan.
Earlier this week, the Board of Estimate deferred a vote on the Trump proposal, which is the first project to be proposed under a new city program designed to spur private investment.
Gyuman B. Cantor, the president of the Carter Hotels Operating Corporation, said he prepared immediately to pay the city $2 million for the property and spend at least $2 million on renovations of the 1,800-room, 63-year-old hotel, at Lexington Avenue and 122d Street.
Mr. Cantor operates the Dixie, Empire and George Washington Hotels in New York City, the Essex and Albany Hotels in Boston and the Lafayette Hotel in Buffalo.
Less Tax Abatement
Under Mr. Cantor's proposal, which calls for renovating but not gutting the existing hotel, the length of tax abatement would be less than the profit-sharing for the city more than the Trump proposal.
The Trump proposal provided that the city would receive $250,000 in lieu of taxes, which now amount to more than $1 million annually, for the first five years, $350,000 for the next five years, $600,000 beginning in the 11th year and an additional $75,000 each year until the 41st year, when it would increase by $150,000.
The city would also share 10 percent of the first $500,000 of profits, 12 1/2 percent of the next $1 million and 15 percent of all additional profits, although the total of the base rent and any profit-sharing of the property's back-

Publicity on Callaway Plagues Ski Resort

By JAMES P. STERBA
Special to The New York Times

CRESTED BUTTE, Colo.—It has been so warm and sunny up on Howard Callaway's ski mountain that students on spring vacation have been schussing in T-shirts, their noses caked with white sunscreen goo, their faces as red as Crested Butte, Colo., the burgundy that leaks from their wine-skins into the melting snow.

As usual, last-minute skiers jammed Aspen and Vail nearby, but Mount Crested Butte was relatively vacant—a clump of Georgians here, a few Texans there and uncluttered ski slopes everywhere. It's been that way here—largely undiscovered and off the beaten trail—for years, although charter flights from the Southeast have increased to the point where some local skiers have begun to dub the resort "the Atlanta Alps."

But now Crested Butte has gained national attention. And many here believe that, for better or worse, the tranquility is about to change. "You can kiss off the best-kept skiing secret in the Rockies," said a student from Colorado's Western State College in Gunnison, 30 miles away. "This place is most definitely on the map."

Fast Growth Opposed
Ironically, it got there because some local residents, espousing slow growth, feared that the resort's developers were improperly ramrodding efforts to subdivide their pristine valley and fill it with new homes, condominiums and businesses. They called enough attention so that Mr. Callaway, the resort's principal owner, stepped down as President Ford's campaign manager two weeks ago under charges that he pressed the United States Forest Service from his Pentagon office as Secretary of the Army to get expansion permits.

Woodpiles and Outhouses
Crested Butte is a restored 100-year-old mining town, with false-front stores, woodpiles and outhouses—a quaint lure for people seeking simple, quiet lives, with skiing on the side. About 800 of them live here. Dodie Udall, the Presidential candidate's daughter, waits on tables in the Forest Queen Hotel dining room. David Leinsdorf, the 33-year-old former "Nader raider" and son of Erich, the symphony conductor, put up a law shingle four and a half years ago and is now a county commissioner. Dropouts and assorted "freaks" come and go. Old timers and ranchers watch the parade.

The Crested Butte ski area in Colorado. Many of the resort's "regulars" feel that recent publicity will disturb the "best kept skiing secret in the Rockies."

struction models, and brochures offering condominiums for $45,000. It has only 120 property owners, including some astronauts, but the numbers of visiting skiers have increased yearly.

Mr. Callaway's son, Bo Jr., helps run things. Ralph O. Walton Jr., Mr. Callaway's brother-in-law, is president of the development corporation. Jeff Gifford, son of Frank Gifford, the sportscaster, drives a skier bus. People in the mining town live off money spent by the skiers and developers. And the developers advertise the old town as one of the quality attractions for the resort.

Betty Aitken is the only dissident on the Mount Crested Butte Town Council. She runs the Matterhorn Inn, a hotel for skiers, and favors slow, carefully planned expansion of the resort as the skier population grows.

Trust Plot Is Laid to Mormon Conc

By GRACE LICHTENSTEIN
Special to The New York Times

SALT LAKE CITY—A $3.75 million antitrust suit that offers an unusual peek into the huge, diversified business empire owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has been filed in Federal District Court here.

The case is apparently the first major antitrust action against a Mormon church corporation since the Utah-Idaho Sugar Company was sued on price-fixing charges in 1971. The income of the church, which has its world headquarters here, is kept secret but is recently estimated at more than $3 billion a year. Its holdings would rank it among the country's 50 largest corporations.

over the amount owed to the bank. The antitrust suit was filed last November by Gary L. Baum, who had run a cherry-processing plant in Provo for 18 years.

According to Mr. Baum, a group of cherry growers organized a boycott against him in 1974, refusing to sell him cherries he needed for his plant. Joining in the boycott, he says, was the Elberta Farm Corporation, a cherry-growing operation whose stock is owned entirely by the church.

Mr. Gillman and his also tried to buy property at one time. Because Mr. Gillman is a grower "interested" with his Department duties, said, he was further involvement in Mr. Baum, Mr. still both a grower and a department official, said he was not going wrongdo.

It also owns a worth of stock in Mirror Company, fishes the Los Angeles 36-story apartment in New York City, student Brigham University, a village in a 260,000-acre cask Florida.

Dr. Butz acknowledged that he had received the memo after the July meeting. He said, however, that Mr. Malone was incorrect in saying that Secretary Butz apparently took personal action. Dr. Butz insisted that the Aug. 18 notation was an order to a subordinate to telephone Mr. Resler, not a reminder that he himself do the calling. He said the notation read, "Campbell thinks Bo [Mr. Callaway] has a case here."

Dr. Butz said that at no time did he discuss the Crested Butte situation with Mr. Callaway, and insisted that he had made no attempt to persuade the Forest Service to approve the proposed expansion.

Mr. Malone said the memo recommended that Dr. Butz "push" the Forest Service to draft an environmental statement that would allow for approval of the proposed resort expansion at Crested Butte, Colo.

Butz Says He Sent Memo Backing Resort

DES MOINES, April 9 (AP)—Earl L. Butz, the Secretary of Agriculture, said today that he forwarded a memorandum from a subordinate supporting the controversial expansion of Howard H. Callaway's ski resort in Colorado.

But Dr. Butz insisted in remarks here in Chicago that this did not constitute a personal involvement by him in efforts by Mr. Callaway, former Secretary of the Army and, until last month, President Ford's campaign chairman, to obtain approval by the Forest Service to expand his resort onto Federal land. The Forest Service is part of the Department of Agriculture.

Maine to Vote on Containers
AUGUSTA, Me., April 9—A bill setting a statewide Nov. 2 referendum on whether to require a nickel deposit on all beer and soft drink containers sold in Maine after Jan. 1, 1978, came law today. Backers of the measure said it would help reduce roadside litter and reduce the pressure to expand community dumps.

"Overbuilt Already"
"It's overbuilt already," she said. "Except for the Christmas holidays, when we're full, there are a lot of empty rooms around here. I'd love to have another mountain to ski on, but why another village?"

Mr. Callaway's corporation is seeking a permit to build new ski runs on Mount Snodgrass, nearby, so its properties at the base of that mountain can be developed and gradually connected by subdivisions to the current resort.

Mr. Leinsdorf, the county commissioner, is philosophical about the controversy. "If they would have just

Girls Taken From Foster Parents After Five Years

By BARBARA CAMPBELL
Young sisters were taken yesterday from the home of their foster parents and a half year, who were ordered by a judge to see the children again.
The order, issued by a State Supreme Court in Nassau County, ended a two-year battle between the foster parents and the biological mother and months of emotionally charged court-ordered removals and last-minute court-granted stays.
The girls—Cheryl, 13, Patricia, 12, and Cynthia, 9—had insisted on two court trials last year in State Court that they never wanted to return to their mother, Patricia Wallace of Long Beach, N.Y., because she was a stranger and that all they remembered about their mother was abuse and neglect.
The girls said they considered the foster parents, George and Dorothy Lhotan, their real mother, and the Hicksville neighborhood where they had made many friends in and out of church, their home.
The lawyer for the Lhotans, Lester Lowry of the New York Civil Liberties Union's children's rights project, said the court decision was a relief. He made it after a temporary stay was granted by the State Court of Appeals this week to hear an appeal of the case.
Mrs. Wallace's Legal Aid Society had argued that the mother now was fit for her children and should have them. Miss Lowry had argued that "whatever bonds exist between the natural mother and her children had been broken by her early neglect and her failure to visit them while they were in foster care." The children, she argued, had been "psychologically abandoned," and removing them from their foster home, she said, would be "extremely harmful."

In earlier interviews the children had expressed bitter feelings toward their mother and recalled days when they ate flowers and leaves from bushes because they were hungry. Miss Lowry had contended during the trial that the girls' wishes should be considered paramount over the claim of their mother.
In his decision in October, Justice Bernard McCaffrey in State Supreme Court in Nassau said the foster parents should not have allowed their love for the girls to have "grown too deep" and that they had a responsibility to prepare the girls to return eventually to their real mother. Mrs. Cunha, who heads the Organization of Foster Parents for Equality and Reform, packed the girls' Easter baskets and other gifts—stationery, pencils, stamps and small change to enable them to keep in touch with their friends.
As the girls left the Lhotans' four-bedroom home—their bedrooms still contained their dolls, clothing and books—Mrs. Cunha said: "Hurry, hurry, we don't want to be late, we don't want to get in trouble."
"What are those two little ones going to do?" said Mrs. Lhotan. "Every night since all of this started they have taken one of my sweaters to bed to sleep with. How are they going to sleep tonight?"

News Summary and Index

SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1976

The Major Events of the Day

- International: The United States announced yesterday that it and the Soviet Union had completed the proposed text of a treaty that would limit the size of underground nuclear tests for peaceful purposes. [Page 1, Column 8.]
- Metropolitan: The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said that a construction permit should be granted for the world's first floating nuclear power plant off New Jersey because benefits outweigh the adverse environmental effects. In a book-length report on a two-year study, the commission's staff decided that the plant, a project of the Public Service Electric and Gas Company of Newark, posed a "very low" risk of lethal radioactivity through the air or water and that it was "unlikely" that the tourist economy of the New Jersey shore would suffer. [1-6-7.]
- National: The House approved a $33.4 billion military authorization bill that would add about $2 billion to the Administration's defense program, primarily for the construction of nuclear-powered ships for the Navy. The annual military bill was passed, 298 to 52, and sent to the Senate after the House, in two days of debate, rejected all attempts to block or defer expensive new weapons programs, such as the B-1 strategic bomber and a nuclear-powered supercarrier. [1-5.]
- International: The Agriculture Department said that the unusually dry winter and weeks of searing winds in the five major winter wheat states had reduced the crop expected this year by more than 26 percent. It estimated this year's yield at 521.8 million bushels. This is 181.4 million bushels less than last year's record crop. But the total 1975 winter and spring wheat crops were the largest in the country's history, and demand for them so far this year has slowed. As a result, crop forecasters are expecting a carryover at the end of this crop year of nearly 500 million bushels, about a year's domestic needs. [1-1.]
- Metropolitan: The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said that a construction permit should be granted for the world's first floating nuclear power plant off New Jersey because benefits outweigh the adverse environmental effects. ### Proposed Catskill Land Gift Stirs Controversy on Taxes

By HAROLD FABER
Special to The New York Times
TURNWOOD, N. Y. — A proposed gift to a tax-exempt organization of 3,700 acres of land along the Beaverkill River, one of the prime trout-fishing streams in the country, is causing a major controversy in this sparsely settled area of the Catskill Mountains.
At the center of the controversy is the Town of Hardenburgh in the southwestern tip of Ulster County. The town has a population of 239 persons in its 84 square miles, which are mostly wooded. It has two gas stations, some logging operations, one machine shop, a few tourist homes, beautiful scenery, trout streams and several fishing clubs.
Back in 1883, a group of New Yorkers came up to Balsam Lake at the headwaters of the Beaverkill and founded the Balsam Lake Club, one of the oldest dry-fly fishing clubs in the nation. The first entry in the club's logbook, dated May 16, 1885, records that one fisherman caught 30 trout in 15 minutes.
Today, the fish are still there, but the club, which consists of 25 lawyers mainly from New York City, is on the verge of dissolution. It owes $66,000 in back taxes and is trying to dispose of most of its land before the new tax year starts on May 1.
Proposal Opposed
"Because of the tax situation, the club is virtually bankrupt," according to John H. Wilkinson, its president, who is a lawyer in the firm of Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Irvine in New York City. "We do not want to see the land for development, and we will give it away rather than sell it."
But the proposed solution—a donation of land to the non-profit, tax-exempt Catskill Center for Conservation and Development in Hobart, N.Y.—is causing hard feelings here because of the potential loss of tax money. The center's board of directors, which is split on the subject, will meet today to consider the transaction.
The controversy also illustrates in microcosm a growing state and national problem—how to preserve open spaces forever wild without posing intolerable tax burdens on people who live in and around those areas.
"We think that anybody has a right to do what he wants with his property," said Lester T. Bourke, a former New York City fireman who is now the Supervisor of the Town of Hardenburgh. "But the problem is that tax exemptions are causing an increasing tax load for the remaining people in town."
He contended that the town had no legal power to block the transfer of the land to

A trout fisherman casting along the section of the Beaverkill River owned by the Balsam Lake Club.

Dispute on Taxes: Everybody here agrees that rising taxes are the cause of the controversy, but there is disagreement about whether the local tax rate discrimination against the Balsam Lake Club and other large landowners.
Mr. Bourke cited figures to show that taxes on the club had risen by more than 300 percent in three years to a total of about $32,000. Mr. Bourke did not dispute those figures, but pointed to his own real estate tax bill, which had risen from $423 in 1972 to $1,158 this year. "They claim they were unfairly assessed and they were—way too low," he went on. He calculated that the club was paying taxes of about $8 an acre, while he was paying more than $15 an acre.
"I believe in conservation, too, conservation of people as well as trees," Mr. Bourke said.
In addition to the taxes, another difference of opinion has arisen here on the terms of the land transfer. The club, according to Mr. Bourke, plans to give the center all the land except about 200 acres. The club area would include Balsam Lake itself, the clubhouse on the lake and a strip of about 50 feet on both sides of the Beaverkill, extending about six miles, which would not be open to the public.
This has aroused some bitterness among some townspeople, who say that it will result in "a bunch of local people supporting a group of millionaires sportsmen," according to Roswell Sanborn, editor of The Catskill Mountain News in nearby Margaretville.

ate to Study Alleged Defects in Pipes of Sewer Project in Southwest Suffolk

By PRANAY GUPTA
Special to The New York Times

DENHURST, L.I., April 9 — The State Department of Environmental Conservation announced today that it would engage engineers to investigate alleged defects in pipelines already in place as part of the controversial $170-million Southwest Suffolk sewer project here.

The State said that the pipelines were designed differently than the model approved by the department and that some of them might not meet the state's minimum standards, according to Mr. Mrazek, chairman of the Suffolk County Legislative Finance Committee.

Mr. Mrazek, Democrat of the party, has also charged that the project, on which $300 million has already been spent, is expected to serve more than 250,000 of Suffolk's 1.2 million residents. The project encompasses Babylon and Islip Towns. At present, residents of this area use cesspools to discharge their waste, which scientists say leads to the pollution of Long Island's supply of groundwater.

The announcement of the state's investigation of the project came after a meeting this morning between Mr. Mrazek, Paul Gianelli, the chief assistant Suffolk district attorney, and Lawrence Finnegan, the state's chief inspector for environmental matters.

Mr. Mrazek presented to Mr. Finnegan what he said was evidence showing that if the pipelines already installed were permitted to function, part of the sewer system would not work. He said that sewer discharge pipes from many of the 80,000 homes included in the project would clog and cause health and environmental hazards.

Mr. Finnegan, acting at the behest of Ogden R. Reid, the Commissioner for Environmental Conservation, agreed to Mr. Mrazek's request for a state investigation. He indicated that state engineers and other personnel would begin a study next week.

Yless Furlough Averted for City U. Faculty Again

By JUDITH CUMMINGS

Chancellor of City University of New York, Dr. Robert J. Kibbee, announced yesterday that there would be no payless furlough for faculty and staff members during the Easter holiday next week as had been proposed to save the financially troubled university.

A spokesman for the union representing the faculty said that the furlough had been canceled and that the university was still negotiating with the union for a salary increase.

It thus became the second consecutive month in which a weeklong furlough was averted. The Board of Higher Education had planned four weeks, one each month from March through June, to save $32 million of a $55 million deficit projected for the fiscal year in the spring semester.

Progress in Talks Seen

University facilities will be closed next week—during which a payless furlough was to be closed—only if the union agrees to save $3 million. However, a union spokesman said that the university would be permitted to close essential facilities, such as libraries.

The cancellation of the furlough had been hinted at earlier in the week by officials of the Professional Staff Congress, the union that represents 17,000 university employees.

Dr. Kibbee said in a statement that he was canceling the action because of progress in negotiations with the union to replace the contract that expired last Aug. 31.

A spokesman for the union, Aaron Alexander, said the two sides were considering a provision in the contract that would allow payment of two weeks' salary to be deferred to "subsequent year." The union is seeking a cost-of-living increase and greater longevity raises, he said.

Dr. Kibbee said in his statement that "negotiations with the Professional Staff Congress have achieved a level of progress that encourages me to believe that a tentative agreement may be reached shortly."

A university spokesman, William A. Spiegler, held open the possibility that the furlough periods could be held at a later date if efforts for a solution through negotiation failed.

Some of about 300 demonstrators who have been protesting budget cuts for drug abuse programs in front of Gracie Mansion

300 in Drug Programs Keep Vigil at Gracie Mansion

Almost 300 former addicts and drug users who have been sitting and sleeping on the sidewalk in front of Gracie Mansion say they plan to stay there until the budget cuts for city and state drug abuse programs are restored.

"This is Forgotten City and these are forgotten children," said the protesters, and the demonstrators.

Directors of major drug-free treatment programs said that because of a 40 percent, or $8.6 million, cut in state funds and a proposed $5.5 million cut in city funds, many of the facilities would have to close, forcing addicts back on the street.

For many of the 3,000 in residential programs, the budget cuts will mean returning to prison on probation or parole. "Returning them to prison or to state facilities, which are four times as costly to operate as residences like Phoenix House, Odyssey and Project Return, will cost taxpayers much more," said Dr. Mitchell S. Rosenthal, regional chairman of Therapeutic Communities of America.

A spokesman for Mayor Beame's office said that the Addiction Services Agency would be phased out over the next two years unless the state stepped in to support it. He said that the demonstrators, who have been camping in the cold since Monday, have not asked to the Mayor.

Frank Rivera, 13 years old, from Project Return's Youth Coliseum facility at 141 East 34th Street, shivered in his light blue blanket, and said: "I didn't get past the stage of marijuana, but I want to stop smoking and get a career like other boys. I'm learning math and history at Project Return, and I want to help the program."

Police who stood and joked with the demonstrators said that they had been peaceful. The demonstrators, who came from all over the state, said that people had donated food, crates of oranges and a bus with toilets. "Mrs. Beame should cook us some chicken soup," one of them said.

Metropolitan Briefs

Bridge-Toll Hearing Ordered

Almost a year after the filing of a formal complaint against the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey for raising bridge tolls 50 percent, the Federal Highway Administration has ordered a full administrative law judge hearing on whether the increase was lawful. The Federal agency's action was in response to the complaint filed on April 16, 1975, by Representative Peter A. Foy, Republican-Conservative of the Bronx and Westchester County. He has contended that the increase was unreasonable and has said he will request a complete rollback of the tolls if they are found to be unlawful.

Cahn Told He Can Represent Himself

A Federal judge in Brooklyn has given permission to William Cahn, former Nassau County District Attorney, to serve as his own lawyer in his trial next month on charges of double-billing Nassau County and law enforcement organizations for trips he made to conventions. Judge Orrin G. Judd said he agreed reluctantly to Mr. Cahn's request to represent himself. Mr. Cahn said that he could not afford the legal fees involved. The trial has been tentatively scheduled for May 3.

7 West Side Schools Defy Policy on Shortened Day

By LEONARD BUDER

Ignoring new warnings from School Chancellor Irving Anker's trustee, seven of the 22 schools in a West Side district kept pupils in classes yesterday for a full day.

The trustee, Alfredo Mathew Jr., said later that he intended to take "all necessary and appropriate legal steps" to compel the schools to comply with the City Board of Education's policy on shortened school days.

He declined to say what these steps might be, but earlier he had indicated that disciplinary action, possibly including suspension, would be taken against those principals and other officials of District 3 who did not cooperate with him.

Mr. Mathew, a former superintendent of the district, said he had already given a formal warning to the current acting superintendent, Clinton Howze, and an official reprimand to one principal, whom he did not identify.

Policy Is Defied

Mr. Howze, who once served as a deputy to Mr. Mathew during the latter's service in the district, said later that he intended to take his instructions from his community board.

"I have been directed by the community school board not to implement the shortened school day," he said. "That is my position."

Superintendents are employed by their local boards, but they are subject also to the orders and discipline of the city's schools Chancellor. On Wednesday, Chancellor Anker superseded the District 3 board for defying the citywide policy on shortened school hours and assigned Mr. Mathew, a top headquarters official, to bring about compliance.

Last fall, after the five-day teacher's strike, the board of Education mandated that school days be shortened by 45 minutes—to 2:45 P.M.—twice a week to save money.

22 Hurt in School Bus Crash

A collision between two school buses in Massapequa Park, L.I., injured 17 children and five teachers or parent aides. A spokesman for the Brunswick Hospital Center in Amityville said all were treated and then sent home. Nassau County police officers said the two buses had been carrying second-grade students from the Deauville Elementary School in Copiague, L.I., to the Hofstra University campus in Hempstead. When the lead vehicle stopped for a traffic light on Sunrise Highway, the second bus crashed into it, the police said.

Federal Agents Seize Bet Cashers

Federal undercover agents who had staked out the betting windows at Aqueduct Race Track for five months arrested the last of a 14-member group of "10 percenters." According to the Federal Strike Force Against Organized Crime, most were young men who were unemployed. "Ten percenters" get their name from the fee they charge for cashing large winning tickets for people who would have to pay heavier taxes. Every bettor collecting more than $600 on a winning ticket is required to fill out a tax form.

Thruway Repairs to Slow Traffic

The State Thruway Authority said that southbound motorists would find traffic delays through July on the section of the Gov. Thomas E. Dewey Thruway between the Harriman and Suffern interchanges. Up to two lanes of the three-lane route will be closed at various times to allow highway and bridge repairs, the authority said. The project is scheduled to be completed July 30.

From the Police Blotter:

One patron was killed and two other persons were wounded in a Greek restaurant at 1470 St. Nicholas Avenue, at 184th Street in Washington Heights, by two men who fired about a dozen shots from a rifle and an automatic handgun following a dispute. The dead man was identified as Nikos Kosmas, 30 years old, of 615 West 183d Street. The co-owner, Dimitrios Hantzias, 40, of 1164 St. Nicholas Avenue, was wounded in the abdomen and admitted to Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, where the third victim was treated and released. Arrested for homicide were Juan Sanchez, 24, and Manuel Garcia, 28, both of 556 West 185th Street. . . . The body of a 25-year-old Bronx man who had been shot through the head was found near the golf course in Pelham Bay Park. He was identified as Rafael Sotelo of 631 East 137th Street. The shooting might have been related to a dispute over narcotics, the police said.

U.S. Study Backs Floating Jersey A-Plant

last week, Dr. Joseph A. Linsik, chief of oncology and hematology at the Atlantic City Medical Center, testified that even normal releases from the plant might help spread cancer.

The tens of thousands of people who visit nearby beaches during the summer could not be evacuated in time to avoid radiation exposure in event of an accident, according to the testimony of Representative William J. Hughes, Democrat of Ocean City, N.J. "By what standard is this county chosen for this experiment unique to the world?" asked Daniel F. Todd, Atlantic County Recorder, noting that the county is the heart of the coastline and produced $4 billion a year through tourism.

The Procedure

The report by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's staff is a first draft on environmental impacts. The final version may be modified by comments of state and local and Federal agencies that review it. Then hearings on the final version will be held by the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board before the board decides whether to grant Public Service a permit to proceed.

In its draft, the commission's staff noted that Atlantic County and Brigantine and several citizens groups in the area had expressed concern that vacationers would shun the shore for fear of risk from the plant even if told the risk was slight. "The staff has given extensive consideration to these concerns," the study says, "and although any firm conclusions must be highly speculative, the staff believes that in the absence of adverse publicity about the safety of the Atlantic generating station, it is unlikely that the tourist and summer-resident economy will be adversely affected."

Advantages Cited

The authors of the study said they based this on attitudes on communities near land-based nuclear plants, including the Nine-Mile Point plant at Scriba, N.Y., and the Pope County, Ark., plant.

According to the study: "Operation of the proposed Atlantic generating station would contribute substantially toward a reduction of the applicant's dependence on unpredictable foreign sources of expensive oil, and a positive effect on the nation's balance of payments posture, and energy independence objectives and tend to reduce the environmental effects of fossil-fuel combustion."

The study found dredging for a protective breakwater and transmission lines would stir up 127 acres of sea bottom, creating potentially heavy siltation.

Installation of buried cables to bring the electricity ashore, it found, will tear up 43 acres of marsh and forest land between the shoreline and a switching station planned near Tuckerton.

The study said much of this digging could be done in an existing road, Great Bay Boulevard, rather than the surrounding wetlands.

Some residents in the community of Atlantis may have to be displaced for the cable corridor, the study said. "However," it said, "the cable will be housed around as many of the residences as possible."

The study found that the wetlands construction "may affect the business of several marinas."

"Construction traffic and activity along Great Bay Boulevard will also temporarily affect recreation activities, boaters and fishermen using the marinas, duck hunters, bird watchers and sightseers," he said.

ail Suicide in Yonkers Is Buried

YONKERS, April 9 (AP)—A brief funeral service was held here today for 20-year-old Steven Karagianis, who hanged himself in a jail cell yesterday after being arrested on a probation violation warrant that had been issued in January.

About 75 people, many of them his young friends, attended the 10-minute Greek Orthodox ceremony in Holy Trinity's Funeral Home on North Broadway.

Karagianis's mother said her father wept openly. His father, John, had to help support his mother as she walked from the funeral parlor. As the mourners entered the 25-car motorcade, they could see the jail—only three blocks away—where the young man gave up hope of life.

The funeral ceremony itself was closed to the press. Burial was in Mount Olive Cemetery in Bayside, Queens.

Mr. Karagianis' brother was bitter over the death. "I'm angry because there was no excuse for this," he said.

The dead youth's father had heard there had been a computer error concerning the warrant.

"You can't trust a boy's life to a computer," he said.

Smokestack Stocks Gain in Popularity

By ROBERT METZ

One of the more interesting points about the current bull market is the strength of a number of basic-industry stocks.

The popularity of certain steel, paper, metal and chemical shares reflects earnings recoveries from recession lows that in many instances exceeded 100 percent.

Their popularity also seems a result of the Pension Reform Act of 1974.

The Pension Act stressed diversification for safety reasons and intimidated that many accountants if they failed to meet vaguely stated standards of prudence.

The present bull market sent the smokestack shares up. Within months it seemed, a number of basic-industry stocks soared beyond expected levels.

These gains and gains for other basic-industry stocks have brought the inevitable debate over whether the shares can be relied on for further stock market profits.

Bradford Story of the investment firm of Brundage, Story & Rose ties his enthusiasm for basic-industry stocks to the high cost of capital investment of such companies in an inflationary environment.

Mr. Story, who has managed investments for more than half a century, said that United States Steel's rise from a low of 30 to its current price of 79 1/2 does not fully reflect the costs of the steel company's capital investment.

Thus United States Steel and other such capital-intensive stocks cannot be judged in terms of current earnings, but should be viewed in terms of an "ultimate" earnings concept.

Mr. Story said that one should buy shares of individual companies as long as they were lower than prices reflecting replacement costs and as long as there is sufficient demand for their product to require additions. The cost of new investment will be reflected in the price of the product—whether steel, copper or whatever.

"If it is true that it costs from $5,500 to $6,000 to add a ton of copper productive capacity, then eventually the price of copper has to rise enough to justify that capital expenditure," Mr. Story said.

"You don't know when the price of the product is going to go up—whether in one year or three—but the price of the shares eventually must reflect plant replacement costs," he added.

Mr. Story said that "something funny is going on in the stock market, called major institutional accumulation." The strength of latent demand for basic-industry shares is clear, he said, in the way institutions "gobbled up" the 1.5 million shares of Inland Steel offered to the public at 49 3/4 on March 20.

Ariel Halpern, chief investment officer of Wood Struthers & Winthrop, was less enthusiastic about the smokestack companies. He feels the shares are crowding out growth stocks in institutional portfolios.

Mr. Halpern believes that basic-industry stocks may experience selling when a proposed change in cost accounting, called for by higher depreciation to reflect plant replacement costs—is examined fully.

"I can't believe it will happen, but it will be discussed at some point and the stocks of basic-industry companies may suffer," Mr. Halpern said.

He added that although overall corporate profits including those of the smokestacks should rise about 25 percent this year, they will begin to lag by the fourth quarter.

"For this reason, we feel that growth stocks—companies which experience regular earnings gains a year—will then look very attractive indeed."

Coalition Seeks to Save International Paper Jobs

The Paper Corporation of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and George S. Petty, president of Tembec Forest Products of Montreal, a former member of International Paper's management.

Mr. Dunlap and Mr. Petty have had similar battles with giant paper companies. In May, 1974 Mr. Dunlap and Mr. Petty formed Nitex from an old Kimberly-Clark Corporation mill that had been closed down in 1973. They bought it for $7 million and reopened it with profit-sharing contracts with the local unions. They expect sales this year to exceed $50 million. They expect sales this year from International Paper after a 16-month struggle that was the subject of a Canadian film Board production called "The Town That Wouldn't Die." It recently reported $9 million profit for 1975.

The three businessmen have reached an agreement with the United Paper Workers Union local that will restore their wages to the schedule in effect when the mill was closed and will also offer profit sharing.

per valued the property at $20 million. Mr. Dunlap said in an interview yesterday that his group's offer of $3 million for the property was equal to the amount International Paper carried it in its books.

An aide to Mr. LaFalce confirmed this as the reported book value for the mill after depreciation charges. The Congressman issued a statement in which he said: "Trying to sell this plant at higher than the depreciated book value would give no weight to the employees involved and the economic well-being of the Tonawanda, but would only add to the $3-billion corporation's already huge profits. . . . At best, this could be termed pure selfishness. . . . At worst, a deliberate attempt to kill the potential purchase deal to keep prices up by withholding this plant's capacity and the productivity of not only the machinery but also the workers from the American market."

Spokesmen for International Paper insist that the company has offered extremely liberal terms for workers willing to relocate at other company mills. They also deny reports that the price it was asking for $100 million to $50 million, then to $30 million and now the $20 million.

Japanese Businesses Strive for Lower Corporate Debt

Preparation for Period of Lower Growth and the Economy

By DREW H. MALCOLM
Special to The New York Times

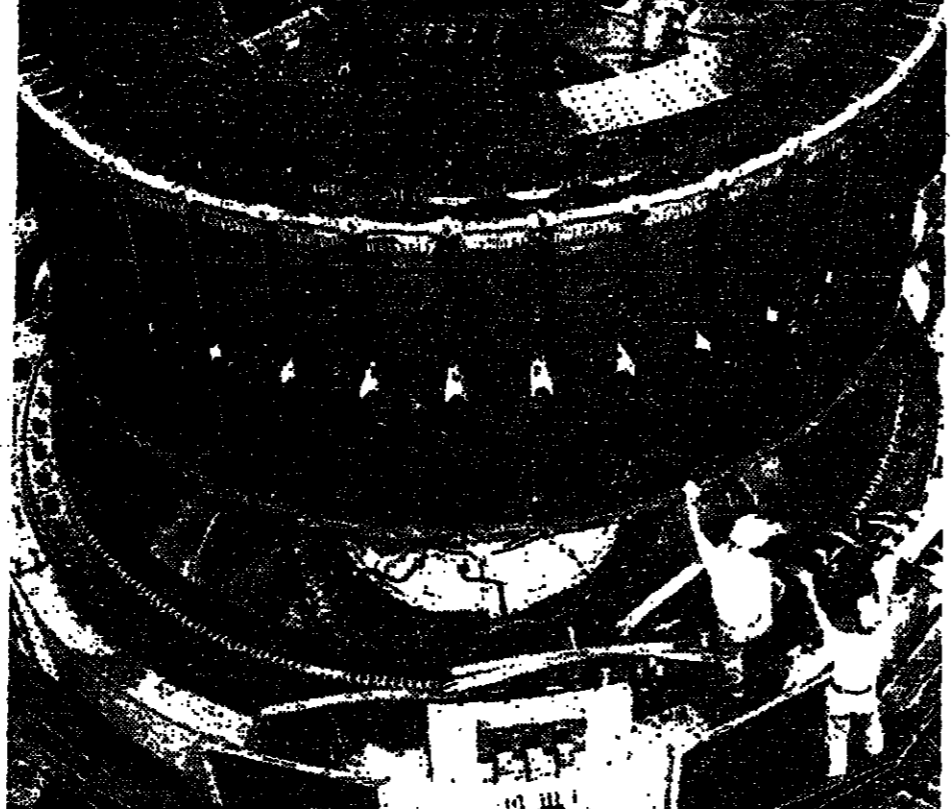

On April 9—Some Japanese businesses, which were carrying unusually large debt burdens in the rapid economic growth of the late 1970s, are preparing for an era of lower growth and the economy.

Analysts, bankers and men here say it is too gauge the exact size of debt reductions but they see it as part of a necessary adjustment to economic realities of a 5 percent annual growth rate. The 1975 energy shock off soaring inflation has led to a recession early 1980's.

There are no firm signs of economic recovery in the automobile, electronics and electrical appliers such as Matsushita and other makers such as Matsushita find themselves in a position to reduce their debt. They say this is largely their capital borrowed during the recession while their sales are affected than those of other industries by the recession.

World War II only 10 percent of industrial debt was borrowed. But turnover of the post-war boom days of 10 percent annual growth enabled this nation's energetic business community to borrow more with assurance that the next year's growth would easily finance the payments.

There is no longer such assurance. "I think from now on the debt-equity ratio will be on a downward trend," said Shinji Tsuji, research director of the Fuji Bank, Japan's second largest.

Giant generator is assembled at Toshiba's Tsurumi works in Japan. Japanese companies are trying to reduce corporate debt to adjust to slower national economic growth.

reduction in capital borrowings, the recent improvement in some corporate debt structures has been relatively easy, said Tsuneo Sanbai, research director for the Industrial Bank of Japan. He said he thought Japan's businessmen instead were beginning to pay much more attention to improving efficiency by vigorous cost-cutting measures, including a careful thinning of employment ranks, a heretofore radical step in Japan.

Adjustments Necessary
Mr. Tsuji of Toyota, for instance, said careful rationalization studies by his company had reduced costs sufficiently so that a profitable year could be achieved with an annual production of 1.8 million autos instead of the 2 million needed before the recession.

For the banks themselves the debt changes will mean some adjustments too. The Japanese, who are formidable savers, continue to put much of their money into bank savings accounts, too. The Japanese, percent interest on a regular savings account up to 7 percent on a two-year certificate of deposit. However, in the future, their savings will likely be lent not so much to corporate borrowers as to the public sectors for improvements, such as sewers, schools, housing and highways, delayed during earlier days.

There is the possibility that the relatively sudden interest in lowering debt ratios may be only temporary. Mr. Sanbai of the Industrial Bank questioned how long such attention would last once the recession ended and business picked up, especially if the prime interest rate, now at 6.75 percent, continued its slow fall.

People and Business Burns Assails House Bill on Fed

The far-reaching bank legislation being considered in the House of Representatives has been stripped of several controversial features, including consolidation of the bank regulatory agencies, but the Federal Reserve Board remains steadfastly opposed to much of it.

Arthur F. Burns, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, testifying in Washington yesterday.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, testifying in Washington yesterday, said that Federal judges were undercutting his drive against illegal price-fixing by handing down mild sentences.

Mr. Kauper added at an American Bar Association conference in Washington that no matter how strongly the Congress or the Justice Department felt about price-fixing violations, businessmen were unlikely to take the Sherman Act seriously until District Court judges did so.

He noted that, although Congress had increased maximum jail sentences for violators of antitrust laws, it did not make them mandatory and the expected deterrent effect has not been realized.

Under a new law, the maximum penalty for corporations is a $50,000 fine, while a $50,000 fine and one year in prison is the maximum penalty for individual violators.

Mr. Richardson said that the economy's real growth rate in the first three months of this year would exceed that of the 1975 fourth quarter, which rose at an annual rate of 5 percent. He did not indicate how much stronger the growth rate would be.

Ellott L. Richardson believes that the United States may experience some acceleration in the rate of inflation by early summer.

The Commerce Secretary noted that this might occur particularly if farm prices strengthened as a result of unfavorable weather.

However, Mr. Richardson said in an article in a Commerce Department publication, Commerce America, that prices over the year are expected to show a "modest improvement" in contrast with the 7 percent rise in consumer prices last year.

He pointed out that the recent slowdown in consumer prices reflected declines in food and gasoline, which, he said, "won't decline indefinitely."

Mr. Richardson said that the economy's real growth rate in the first three months of this year would exceed that of the 1975 fourth quarter, which rose at an annual rate of 5 percent. He did not indicate how much stronger the growth rate would be.

Venezuela Acts on Exxon Units

The Exxon Corporation said yesterday that the Venezuelan Government had filed a $231 million tax deficiency claim for 1970 against two of its affiliates, Creole Petroleum and International Petroleum (Venezuela) Ltd. An Exxon spokesman said that its legal counsel in Venezuela regarded the claims as without legal foundation and said they would be resisted vigorously in the courts.

G.M. to Add Employees in Jersey

The General Motors Corporation announced today that it would add 2,000 employees and a second shift to its Linden, N.J., assembly plant June 7 because of increased demand for the big luxury cars built there. G.M. had announced Feb. 20 that it would add a second shift to this plant with 1,000 employees and that both work turns would produce at the rate of 40 cars an hour, effective May 17. Since then, sales of luxury cars have increased, and G.M. said the plant is now scheduled to build cars at the rate of 56 an hour on two shifts, requiring an additional 1,000 workers. The plant builds the Buick Electra, Oldsmobile 98 and some Cadillac models.

Chrysler Pays off U.S. and Canada Debt

DETROIT, April 9—The Chrysler Corporation has paid off the short-term debt it accumulated in North America during last year's recession, according to John J. Riccardo, the chairman.

Getty and Utilities in Uranium Pact

The Getty Oil Company and 14 electric utilities in Wisconsin and New England announced yesterday in Milwaukee that they had signed a five-year uranium production sales agreement. The contract, which extends from late 1977, provides for the sale of Getty Oil's net share of uranium concentrates produced in the Shirley Basin of Wyoming, with production to range from a minimum of 800,000 pounds to a maximum of 1.3 million pounds annually. No financial terms of the agreement were disclosed.

LEON HESS CITES PAYMENTS ABROAD

Mr. Hess added, however, that if the supply were terminated it "could be replaced without interruption from other sources at an immaterial price differential."

Amerasia Hess has foreign exploration and production operations in Libya, the British sector of the North Sea, Canada and Abu Dhabi.

The company, however, fills its crude oil requirements by purchasing from foreign sources. Its largest refining operation is in St. Croix, Virgin Islands.

Drought Cuts Wheat Estimate; This Year's Yield Still Large

The drought in the area of the Dust Bowl of the 1930's has been expected a total 1976 American wheat crop of 2.1 billion bushels, another bumper yield. Last year's crop totaled 2.13 billion bushels.

"This year's winter and spring wheat production should be enough to meet all domestic and export needs and yield a good carryover," Mr. Butz said. Some rain has fallen in the drought area since the special report was completed April 1. But this was not enough to salvage wheat crops on land that had already "blown out."

The soil-destroying wind erosion mostly affected unirrigated, marginal land. Farmers in such areas acknowledge being gamblers who periodically lose their winter wheat crops.

By April 1 in Kansas, the country's largest wheat-producing state, 775,000 acres had been blown out, and the winter wheat on 2.1 million acres had been abandoned.

This was 16 percent of the land planted with winter wheat in Kansas. The average amount of abandonment in the last five years has been 5.5 percent. However, a total of 13.1 million acres were planted in winter wheat in Kansas last fall. Moisture supplies in the northwestern and north-central sections of the state have been closer to normal, and the wheat in these areas was reported to be doing almost as well as it did last year.

Carey and Democratic Aides in Albany Seeking an Alternative to Stavisky Bill

By LINDA GREENHOUSE

ALBANY, April 9 — Negotiations began today with renewed urgency to find an alternative to the Stavisky bill, which was prevented from becoming law over Governor Carey's veto by the narrowest margin in a dramatic Senate session that lasted until early this morning.

Free them to override the veto in a second vote next Tuesday unless he had evidence of "credible, major and consistent" efforts by the Governor and the Mayor to find an alternative to the Stavisky bill.

The Stavisky bill would force the city to give the Board of Education an additional $150 million, but, as many Senators pointed out in the debate, it would not force the board to spend the money to assure class sizes or the length of the school day, the two problems of greatest concern to parents.

At a news conference in New York City today, the bill's sponsor, Assemblyman Leonard P. Stavisky, a Queens Democrat, predicted that the second attempt to override the veto would succeed, and he expressed annoyance at not being included in today's meeting.

Others who have followed the bill's progress said, however, that they detected a shift in the public perception of the bill that could well tip the balance more solidly against a vote to override the veto.

Suspense Uncommon Other municipal unions have openly broken with the United Federation of Teachers and have sought to portray the bill not as a panacea for the ills of the city's schools, but a sop to one special-interest group that would result in cuts in other vital services.

Assemblyman Stavisky accused John T. O'Hagan, the New York City Fire Commissioner, of having telephoned Senators last night to threaten the closing of firehouses in their districts if they voted to override the veto.

Lobbyists for unions, such as District Council 37 of the American Federation of City, State and County Employees and the city's sanitation workers, although far outnumbered by teacher lobbyists, were noticeable here yesterday.

Commissioner O'Hagan could not be reached tonight for comment.

Real suspense is rare in Albany, where the outcome of major votes is almost always known in advance and where what passes for drama is often carefully staged. The Assembly's action last week in overriding the Stavisky bill veto by a vote of 128 to 18, for example, surprised no one.

But the roll call this morning in the Senate was as authentically suspenseful and dramatic as anyone here could recall. Emotions were running so high and sentiment was so closely divided that not even the top leadership knew with certainty what the result would be.

Several Democratic Senators had refused to tell Senator Ohrenstein in advance how they would vote.

The roll call finally ended with a vote of 39 to 19—one short of the 40 votes needed to override the veto and an apparently stinging Democratic victory. But the leaders' jubilation was short-lived. Two Republican Senators who had voted to sustain the veto stood up and changed their votes. Suddenly the roll call stood at 41 to 17.

Brooklynite Switches Then, as if on the other end of a see-saw, two Brooklyn Democrats who had earlier spoken in favor of overriding the veto got up to change their votes. One was the two, Major J. Owens and Jeremiah B. Bloom, were speaking, the deputy majority leader, William T. Conklin, Republican of Brooklyn, rushed over to Richard Schermerhorn, one of two Republicans who were left on the side of sustaining the veto.

"Remember what we did for you in Kingston," Senator Conklin said, pleading with his colleague to provide the 40th and crucial vote. As a resident of nearby Cornwall, Senator Schermerhorn had played host to an elaborate Bicentennial Re-enactment of the first Senate session at Kingston last Wednesday. He refused to change his vote.

The Democratic leaders' victory was finally sealed as Senator Vander L. Beatty, a Brooklyn Democrat who had voted to override the veto.

The revised roll call was 38 to 20. The veto was sustained. "We're a party!" Senator Robert Garcia, a Bronx Democrat and the deputy minority leader, exclaimed exultantly. Other Democrats agreed that this roll-call was the first time they could remember having beaten the Republicans on the Senate floor.

But unity had not come easily for the tense and, in some cases, fearful Democrats, who had been cornered all day by lobbyists for the teachers union. Calling themselves the Committee of 100, the lobbyists were everywhere in the Capitol and reportedly threatened some Senators with mounting and financing primary campaigns against them if they did not vote to override the veto.

Finally, the Democrats locked themselves into a party conference and, while the Republicans waited impatiently for the Senate session to begin, refused to come out.

Ford Signs Law to Ease Municipal Bankruptcy

By MARTIN TOLCHIN

WASHINGTON, April 9 — President Ford today signed into law a municipal bankruptcy act that makes it easier for New York and other financially hard-pressed cities to petition for bankruptcy.

The legislation provides an automatic suspension of proceedings to collect debts from a municipality that has filed a petition for bankruptcy. The legislation also authorizes the Federal court to issue certificates of necessity.

The legislation provides that the Federal Court from a $2.3 billion in short-term Federal loans, the city eliminated 45,000 jobs and made other economies.

The legislation, urged by President Ford, was rushed into law to provide a fallback position for New York City if the city is unable to meet the Federal requirements and loses the Federal funds.

It was enacted by the Senate by a vote of 79 to 19, and by the House of Representatives by 373 to 29.

Unlike the current law, the new legislation does not require the consent of a majority of its creditors before a municipality can file for bankruptcy.

Ex-Guardian of Karen Quinlan Wants to Review Court Decision

By JOSEPH F. SULLIVAN

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 9 — The disconnecting of the respirator that has kept Karen Anne Quinlan alive for almost a year is likely to be delayed at least a week while her former court-appointed guardian and his lawyer review the New Jersey Supreme Court decision that allows her to die.

Thomas L. Curtin, who was replaced as guardian by the father of the comatose 22-year-old woman in the Supreme Court ruling, said he wanted to review the ruling "step by step" with his lawyer, Daniel R. Coburn, before formally bowing out of the case.

Paul W. Armstrong, the Quinlans' lawyer, has written to all parties in the case asking them to reply by letter and confirm their intention not to appeal the New Jersey court's decision to the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. Curtin and Mr. Coburn were among the first to say they would not appeal. "We originally thought someone else would appeal," Mr. Coburn said. "Now that we're the last step, we have some doubts and want to mull it over again."

Mr. Coburn said that he did not believe anyone wanted to delay the action sought by the family but that the 7-to-0 State Supreme Court opinion contained new law "that should be reviewed by the highest court in the land."

"I have no problem with the right of privacy that allows a person to refuse futile medical treatment," he said, "but I don't know whether I agree that someone else can make that decision for an incompetent patient."

However, Mr. Coburn said he doubts whether the former guardian would file an appeal.

Mr. Curtin said that after lawyers for the attending physicians, St. Clare's Hospital in Denville, and the Morris County Prosecutor and State Attorney General all said they would not appeal, "I realized this was the end of the line."

"I want to sit down with Mr. Coburn next week and go over the ruling again step by step before I decide to send a letter to Mr. Armstrong," Mr. Curtin said. "It will make my decision by the end of the week. I don't want to unduly inconvenience the family."

Federal Law and regulation prohibit the payment of a time deposit prior to maturity unless, at a minimum, three months of the interest thereon is forfeited and interest on the amount withdrawn is reduced to passbook rate. Republic specifically reserves the right to prohibit withdrawal prior to maturity. However, if premature withdrawal is allowed, the bank shall impose a substantial penalty in addition to the above.
